TOKIO, Feb. 18. - Fifty thousand paraders, waving red flags and singing labor songs, students marching on half a dozen university campuses and orators haranguing groups in the chill air of the parks marked Feb. 11, the Kingensetsu, as the "May Day" of Japan. The Kingensetsu, literally, is "Foundation Day," the andversary of the date when, 2,500 years ago, Jimmu Tenno, the first Emperor of Japan, ascended the throne and the Empire of

.The paraders with their red flags made up a demonstration in favor of manhood soffrage, later marching, red flags and all, to the entrance gate of the imperial palace to banzai the Emperor, the direct descendant of Jimmu Tenno, and to make it plain that so far as Japan is concerned the red banner does not signify Hotshevism or hors-

Manhood Suffrage Demand.

The demand for manhood suffrage in Japan is growing, the parading thou-sands on Foundation Day merely em-phasizing what was intended as a hint for the members of the Diet, in which pended three manhood suffrage bills, the opposition groups units they have the votes to carry any desired measure over the Government and at the sar lefeat the Ministry, but 0 anese have their own ways of things, politically and otherwise, and does not follow that all, or even a m jority, of a party feel called upon support that party's measures, or the the defeat of a Government bill is prelude to the formation of a new Germeent. At any rate, the outside vocates of manhood suffrage had a great confidence in the passage of an one of the three bills and made this very plain when the great parade of Foundation Day poured as close around inners borne by the marchers were obwas the same as that of revolutionists in feudal days. The paraders finally laid aside all their flags before they gave their final banzais in the parks. The marchers wanted to parade before the official residence of Fremer Hara

The this, as well as in the fact of the great parade itself, there was deep significance for those who know Japan and another centain indication of the steady progress toward democracy that is being made in this last stronghold of autocracy. Two years ago a parade for such an object would have been impossible. One year are it could not thave been held without clashing time and time again with the police. With frage was all the more significant in that it is not yet a year rince an electoral reform bill was passed, which Edmand and another of Charlemagne, more than doubled the number of entering the state of the state o granchised males. This act reduced the qualification for voters from the payment of ten yen a year in direct taxes to the payment of three yen. This bill went through as a Government measure and as a compromise for those who were then demanding manhood suffrage and even universal suffrage. The Government now, as represented by the Selyukal party, has its face set against further concessions, although ready to admit that the time is coming when should have a voice in the selection of the methoders of the Diet.

The representatives are roughly divided as follows: The Selyukal, or Government party. Its: Resuellad, or main Opposition party, 15; Res

The parties sponsoring the manhood suffrage bills are the Kenselkai, Kokuminto and Independents, with no one of the three solid flower the Government forces, while there is no possibility, apparently, of getting a compromise measure that will unite the Opposition. The Government, as things stand to fay, is able to count on 37 votes from the Solko Club and Shinselkai, giving a divisor assing implaced with a special correspondence to The Son And C
